"In order to deserve a place among the best speakers, it is not enough that one should have what is commonly termed a good education and good sense; he must have paid particular attention to the subject of pronunciation—unless he has been surrounded during the whole period of his education with none but correct speakers, which is seldom or never the case, at least in this country."

PREFACE TO THE NEW EDITION

In presenting this latest edition of Mr. W. H. P. Phyfe's handbook it is but honest to state that there are a few changes from the former edition of "18,000 Words Often Mispronounced." These changes are prompted by the fact that the New Webster and the latest Standard Dictionaries, in keeping with the pace of the constantly changing spoken tongue, have not only noted but have accepted and authorized recent popular variations in pronunciation; these variations have been added to and in many cases substituted for the old ones.

Words deleted from the last edition can be counted on the fingers, largely names of persons and places formerly in the public eye but now almost forgotten. In their stead appear those too prominent at the present day to be omitted, new derivatives common in everyday speech, radio and scientific terms, and the multiplicity of opportunist words now generally acceptable.

In making these changes, no violence has been done to the spirit and the standards of the distinguished author who conceived this book. He would have been the first to accept them and to incorporate them in his lists.

We have consulted the bearers of family names odd to our tongue and made inquiry of consuls abroad, who have aided gladly in translating the pronunciations of foreign names and words; our (and your) debt to them is hereby acknowledged.

The book remains as the original author would have it—a help in polishing the "fossil poetry" that is our language, so that our speech may be rich in

... smooth words, like gold-enameled fish, Which circle slowly with a silken swish, And tender ones, like downy-feathered birds; Words shy and dappled, deep-eyed deer in herds.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

It is related of the French painter Girard, that when a youth and in poor circumstances, he was the bearer of a letter of introduction to Lanjuinais, a member of the Council of the First Napoleon. The young artist was shabbily attired, and his reception was frigid in the extreme. Lanjuinais, however, in the course of the conversation that ensued, was so much pleased with the intelligence and amiability displayed by the young man, that at the termination of the interview, he courteously accompanied him to the door of the antechamber.

Girard, contrasting the manner of his cordial dismissal with that of his cool reception, could not avoid an expression of surprise.

"My young friend," said Lanjuinais, anticipating the question, "we receive an unknown person according to his dress—we take leave of him according to his merits."

The lesson here taught with reference to shabbiness of attire suggests a similar one with reference to carelessness in pronunciation. For if the manner of one's dress can play so important a part in his reception by others, it is no less certain that his manner of expression (which is the garb in which our spoken thoughts are clothed) must prejudice others either favorably or unfavorably according as it is or is not correct.

In spoken language, pronunciation is the most striking element, and thus it happens that it is, more than any other one thing, the most obvious test of general culture.

Even in a speaker of recognized ability, his mispronunciations fall harshly upon the ear, and cause the hearer to suspect that his early if not his later education has been wanting in polish; or (what is, perhaps, more to his detriment) that he has not been accustomed to the society of refined and cultivated people.

But pronunciation is important, not merely because it serves to make good the first impressions, but for other and more weighty reasons. The importance of conveying ideas with clearness and precision, cannot for a moment be doubted; and if no acknowledged standard of pronunciation existed, spoken language would largely fail as a medium for conveying ideas.

Those who, in Italy and France, have made a special study of this subject say that there are hundreds, and even thousands of dialects existing in the different parts of those countries, and that persons, meeting from remote sections, find it exceedingly difficult to understand one another. The same is true of Germany and England, but fortunately in a lesser degree of our own country; although any one who has traveled extensively in the United States is able to distinguish already the beginnings of dialects, which should, if possible, be eradicated by teaching a uniform system of pronunciation in our schools, as well as by encouraging correctness of pronunciation among adults generally.

The study of foreign languages has, of late years, assumed great importance in the United States. A leading difficulty in mastering these languages lies at the threshold, in the form of pronunciation. This difficulty might be easily removed by first studying carefully the pronunciation of our own language, which would result in an acquaintance with at least forty-two important elementary sounds. To say nothing of the advantage thus acquired in one's ability to pronounce English, the pronunciation of foreign languages would be rendered comparatively easy, since the remaining eight foreign sounds, so-called, might be easily learned in a single lesson—at least, sufficiently well for practical purposes.

This knowledge of elementary sounds is not only of use in all matters of reading, speaking, cratory, and singing, and in shorthand, but it also assists in awakening people to the monstrosities of our present system of spelling, and the consequent desirability of a spelling reform. This knowledge is also serviceable in assisting one to trace the broad lines of relationship that exist among different languages, as taught in the etymologies of words—an acquaintance with which relationship is exceedingly valuable in mastering not only foreign languages, but our own as well.

The satisfaction that comes from a knowledge of English pronunciation and the consequent ability to pronounce correctly, is similar to the pleasure that results from skill in any other fine art, and becomes a source of continual enjoyment, since this higher art is brought into constant requisition in some form or other.

In presenting to the public a new book on English pronunciation—the third and last of this series—the author desires to call attention to the following points:

- r. The list of words—about seven thousand in number, considered as a carefully selected one, is more complete than any other that has yet appeared. The aim has been to select such words only as, through inherent difficulty or carelessness on the part of the speaker, are liable to be mispronounced; no effort having been made to increase the list by inserting words concerning which no doubt could well arise.
- 2. The number of Proper Names—twenty-five hundred—is unusually large for a book of this kind. No other similar book pretends to give a list in any way approaching it for completeness.
- 3. The list presents the pronunciations of all those common words and phrases from foreign languages that might give difficulty.
  - 4. The pronunciations are very carefully indicated—each sound in each word being accurately represented, so that no shadow of doubt can exist as to the correct pronunciation.

- 5. The system of marking words is not only identical with that used in the two previous volumes of this series, but is practically the same as that employed in Webster's and Worcester's Unabridged Dictionaries; it has, however, been rendered somewhat simpler by respelling the words phonetically, thus avoiding the use of unnecessary or duplicate signs.
- 6. The principal authorities consulted are Webster, Worcester, Stormonth and Haldeman.* For names of places and persons, Lippincott's Gazetteer, and Lippincott's Biographical Dictionary (standard authorities for the pronunciation of Proper Names) have been referred to frequently. In addition, the New Imperial, Walker, Sheridan, Knowles, Jameson, Perry, Smart, Cooley and Cull have been consulted, and, in many instances, their pronunciations have been given.
- 7. Where several important pronunciations of a word occur, the fact is indicated—Webster's pronunciation being generally placed first.
- 8. In addition to the author's comments on various words, quotations are made from leading authorities, where it is thought that these might be valuable or interesting.
- 9. The book will assist a person materially in laying a foundation for the study of French and German, by teaching him the sounds regarded as peculiar to those languages. The frequent occurrence of these sounds in words incorporated into English, suggests the necessity of adopting them into our own language, and this necessity is here recognized.

There is a tendency in the evolution of every spoken language to increase the number of sounds by two processes: first, by the recognition of distinctions among the sounds native to the language; and secondly, by the incorporation of new sounds from foreign languages, when these occur sufficiently often to demand recognition.

Io. A brief chapter on "The Sounds of the English Language—both Native and Adopted," has been prefixed to the "List of Words." The reader is advised to study this chapter carefully. It will be well also to acquaint one's self thoroughly with the "Key of Signs or Diacritical Marks," and to read with attention the chapter entitled "Suggestions Concerning the Use of the Book." In this way, it is hoped that no difficulty will be experienced in ascertaining the pronunciation of any word found in the list.

Those who desire to acquaint themselves with the "Principles" of the art of Correct Pronunciation are referred to the author's manual, entitled "How Should I Pronounce?"; while those who desire a more elementary discussion of the subject will find it in his "School Pronouncer, Based on Webster's Unabridged Dictionary." I take pleasure in acknowledging my indebtedness to Professor Appleton Park Lyon, of New York, whose intimate acquaintance with all matters pertaining to the science of Phonology has been of frequent service to me in settling difficult or doubtful points.

I have endeavored to avoid the too common practice of commenting upon the easy and shunning the difficult; I trust, therefore, that I shall not be held amenable to the criticism involved in Young's familiar couplet:

How commentators each dark passage shun, And hold their farthing candle to the sun.

THE SOUNDS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE—BOTH NATIVE AND ADOPTED

It is not the province of this book to discuss the Elementary Sounds of the English language, except in a general way, nor to give drills in these sounds. The object of the present volume is mainly to indicate the correct pronunciations of words often mispronounced; and it is, in consequence, only necessary in this chapter to furnish a brief survey of the sounds, either actually occurring in English, or adopted into it from foreign languages. By means of this, it is hoped that the exact signification of the key and of the diacritical marks will be easily understood by those who have not had the advantage of studying the other books.

The subject of English pronunciation is more difficult than is generally supposed, and hence it must not be thought that the following remarks are anything more than a set of suggestions for the use of the present volume.

I. SIMPLE OR ELEMENTARY SOUNDS

(1) The Forty-Two Native or Common Elementary Sounds

1) Vowel Sounds.

I. ä, as in arm, father, ah.

This sound should be kept open and broad, and yet should not be confounded either with the sound of a in all, or with the sound of a in at. It is generally called the Italian a.

2. å, as in ask, past, soda.

This is the first shade-vowel sound of a. It is called a shade sound because it differs but slightly from the preceding sound ( $\ddot{a}$ ). It requires some practice to give it correctly.

3. ă, as in at, man, tap.

This sound is the most common sound of a, and is generally known as its short sound.

4. â, as in air, dare, care.

This is the second shade-vowel sound of a, and differs but slightly from the preceding sound ( $\check{a}$ ). It is invariably followed by the sound of r.

5. ĕ, as in ebb, let, met.

This is a very common sound of e, and is generally known as its short sound.

6. ā, as in ale, fate, pay.

This is known as the long sound of a. By some orthoëpists it is considered a diphthongal or double sound.

7. ĭ, as in it, pin, pity.

This sound is generally called the short sound of i.

8. ē, as in eel, meet, he.

This sound is generally called the long sound of e.

9. ŏ, as in odd, pop, cot.

This sound is generally called the short sound of o.

10. ô, as in orange, dog, God.

This is the first shade-vowel sound of o, and differs but slightly from the preceding sound (ŏ), with which it is frequently confounded.

11. ô, as in or, for, bought.

This sound is sometimes called the broad sound of a.

12. ŏ, as in only, whole, Lecocq.

This is the second shade-vowel sound of o, and differs but slightly from the succeeding sound (ō), with which it is frequently confounded.

13. ō, as in old, hope, so.

This sound is generally called the long sound of o.

14. ŏŏ, as in look, book, took.

This sound is commonly called the short sound of double o, and is to be carefully distinguished from the succeeding long sound  $(\overline{oo})$ .

15.  $\overline{oo}$ , as in ooze, moon, coo.

This sound is commonly called the long sound of double o, and is to be carefully distinguished from the preceding short sound (ŏo).

16. û, as in urge, fur, cur.

This is the first shade-vowel sound of u, and closely resembles the succeeding sound  $(\check{u})$ , from which it should be carefully distinguished.

17. ŭ, as in up, but, luck.

This sound is commonly called the short sound of u, and is also known as the natural vowel sound, because it is the one most easily produced by the vocal organs.

18. ẽ, as in ermine, serge, verse.

This is the second shade-vowel sound of u, and differs but slightly from the preceding sound  $(\check{u})$ .

2) Consonant Sounds.

19. y, as in ye, yet, your.

It should be observed that this sound is very similar to that of long e ( $\bar{e}$ ) very lightly pronounced, before an accented vowel sound—as in yard ( $\bar{e}$ - $\ddot{a}rd'$ ).

20. w, as in we, wet, warm.

It should be observed that this sound is very similar to that of long double o ( $\overline{oo}$ ) very lightly pronounced, before an accented vowel sound—as in will ( $\overline{oo}$ -il').

21. r, as in rave, roar, peer.

In foreign languages, the r is generally trilled; in English, less often.

- 22. l, as in lave, lull, ill.
- 23. ng, as in ring, singing, long.

  This sound seems never to occur at the beginning of an English word.
- 24. n, as in no, nun, in.
- 25. m, as in me, mum, him.
- 26. zh, as in azure, measure, rouge.

  The digraph sh never occurs in English; the sound being always represented by some other combination of letters, or by a single letter.

TWENTY THOUSAND WORDS

27. z, as in zebra, buzz, is.

8

- 28. th, as in thy, thither, breathe.
- 29. v, as in van, vivid, have.
- 30.  $\bar{g}$ , as in get, gig, egg.

  This is commonly known as the hard sound of g.
- 31. j, as in jet, judge, edge.

  This is commonly known as the soft sound of g.
- 32. d, as in do, did, add.
- 33. b, as in be, bib, ebb.
- 34. sh, as in she, mission, hush.
- 35. s, as in see, cease, listen.

  This is said to be the most common sound in the language.
- 36. th, as in thigh, thing, moth.

  Persons who lisp, introduce this sound where the sound of s properly belongs.
- 37. f, as in foe, fife, if.
- 38. k, as in key, kick, oak.

39. ch, as in chew, church, each.

This should be regarded as a simple sound, and not, as some orthoëpists claim, a union of t and sh.

- 40. t, as in to, tat, it.
- 41. p, as in pay, pip, lip.
- 42. h, as in he, hot, hoot.

(2) The Eight Adopted or Naturalized Elementary Sounds.

In addition to the ordinary forty-two sounds of the English language, there are certain other sounds which, although, in a certain sense, foreign to the language, may be considered as having been adopted into it, since they occur in words that have been made part of our mother tongue. Even the person who makes no pretension to a knowledge of foreign languages, must frequently encounter such words as Goethe, Müller, encore, vin, bonbon, un Richter, Leipzig.

It is absurd to say that these sounds do not occur in English, since they are already in actual use; moreover, they are of necessity not only recognized, but to some extent discussed, in all our larger dictionaries and works on English pronunciation.

It is virtually impossible to pronounce many familiar proper names with any degree of accuracy, without an acquaintance with these eight sounds, and our dictionaries generally seem to presume that their readers are acquainted with them

The learning of the correct pronunciation of the French and German languages (now so universally studied) would be rendered much easier if a due acquaintance with these sounds were already possessed; as there would then be no new sounds to be learned for these languages, unless one should wish to make finer distinctions than are generally observed.

I. ö, as in Göthe (another spelling for Goethe). French eu, as in leur.

This sound resembles the English e in earth ( $\tilde{e}$ ), which may be substituted for it, when one is unable to produce the original sound.

2. ü, as in Müller. French u, as in tu.

If, while the lips are rigidly held in the position for saying  $o\bar{o}$ , one should attempt, with his tongue, to say  $\bar{e}$ , a close resemblance to this sound would result. For those unable to produce this sound, the sound of u in duke  $(\bar{u})$  may be substituted.

3. än, as in encore.

This is the first of the four French nasal vowels. If the English syllable äng be pronounced, with the ng lightly uttered, it will approximate this sound, and may be substituted for it by those who are unable to give the original sound. The N added to the  $\ddot{a}$  represents no sound, but simply indicates that the a is to be nasalized.

4. ăn, as in vin.

This is the second French nasal vowel. If the English syllable  $\check{a}ng$  be pronounced with the ng lightly uttered, it will approximate this sound, and may be substituted for it by those who are unable to give the original sound. The N added to the  $\check{a}$  represents no sound, but simply indicates that the a is to be nasalized.

5. ôn, as in bonbon.

This is the third French nasal vowel. If the English syllable  $\hat{o}ng$  be pronounced with the ng lightly uttered, it will approximate this sound, and may be substituted for it by those who are unable to give the original sound. The N added to the  $\hat{o}$  represents no sound, but simply indicates that the o is to be nasalized.

6. ŭn, as in un.

This is the fourth French nasal vowel. If the English syllable ŭng be pronounced with the ng lightly uttered, it will approximate this sound, and may be substituted for it by those who are unable to give the original sound. The N added to the  $\tilde{u}$  represents no sound, but simply indicates that the u is to be nasalized.

7. K, as in Richter.

This is a very common sound in German, and may be produced by attempting to give the sound of h, while the vocal organs are rigidly held in a position for giving the sound of k. It may be imitated by prolonging the sound of k in ik, and avoiding the initial part of the k sound. For those who are unable to give this sound, the English sound of k may be substituted. It is well to observe that this sound is slightly modified by the nature of the vowel that precedes it.

The Scotch sound of ch, as heard in loch, is essentially the same, and for all practical purposes may be deemed identical with it.

8. G, as in Leipzig.

This is a vocalized form of the preceding sound. It occurs in German, and may be produced by attempting to give the sound of y, while the vocal organs are rigidly held in a position for giving the sound of k. It may be imitated by prolonging the sound of  $\bar{g}$  in  $i\bar{g}$ , and avoiding the initial part of the  $\bar{g}$  sound. For those who are unable to give this sound, the English sound of  $\bar{g}$  may be substituted. The importance of this sound is duly recognized by Vietor.\*

It may be observed that these eight foreign sounds are frequently found in the ordinary English books and newspapers. These sounds, together with the forty-two native ones previously discussed, give precisely fifty sounds that may be considered in use in the English language.

2. COMPOUND OR DIPHTHONGAL SOUNDS

There are in English, in addition to the fifty simple sounds given above, several compound or diphthongal sounds, so called because each one consists of two simple sounds so closely united as to appear like a single sound. They all belong to the vowel class, and are four in number:  $\bar{\imath}$ , oi, ow,  $\bar{u}$ .

1. ī, as in ice, mine, by.

This compound sound is often mistakenly considered to be a simple sound, because it is generally represented by a single letter. In reality, it consists of a close union of the two simple sounds,  $\ddot{a}$  as in arm, and  $\ddot{e}$  as in eel, with the accent on the first sound; thus  $(\ddot{a}'\ddot{e})$ .

*For a very full and clear discussion of this sound see Vietor's recent and valuable work, "Elemente der Phonetik und Orthoepie des Deutschen, Englischen, und Französischen," pp. 113-124.

2. oi, as in oil, noise, boy.

This compound sound consists of a close union of the two simple sounds,  $\hat{0}$  as in or, and i as in it, with the accent on the first sound; thus  $(\hat{0}'i)$ .

3. ow, as in out, bound, now.

This compound sound consists of a close union of the two simple sounds,  $\ddot{a}$  as in arm, and oo as in oose, with the accent on the first sound thus  $(\ddot{a}'oo)$ .

4. ū, as in duke, lute, new.

This compound sound consists of a close union of the two simple sounds, i as in it, and o0 as in o0o2, with the accent on the f1o5o1.

ACCENT

Every person should be able to accent any syllable in any word, and should practise until he can accomplish this. It may be well to observe that all French words have the accent on the final full syllable, but that this accent is generally very slight

Note.—In addition to what has been said in this chapter, there will be found in their appropriate places throughout the book certain remarks concerning sounds in pronunciation, which it has not been thought advisable to repeat here.

SUGGESTIONS CONCERNING THE USE OF THIS BOOK

Many persons find it difficult to make practical use of a book of this character. This difficulty arises mainly from lack of familiarity with the signs or diacritical marks. By observing the following suggestions, the reader will find the book very easy to use.

1. It is advisable, as soon as possible, to become acquainted with the Key of Signs or Diacritical Marks, on page 19.

In consulting this key, observe that each sign is a definite symbol for a definite sound. Each sound has its own symbol, and no symbol is used for more than one sound. The words are accordingly all respelled phonetically, and each symbol employed is, without exception, the representative of some one sound.

For example, the word  $fat\dot{e}$  is respelled f  $\bar{a}$  t, which a careless person would be liable to pronounce făt—noticing the spelling only and not observing the marking of the letter a. Whereas, by a reference to the key, it will be seen that the three symbols  $(f, \bar{a}, t)$  stand for three definite sounds which, when combined, produce the word fate, as correctly pronounced.

2. In endeavoring to pronounce a word correctly, it is well first, to utter distinctly, and in their proper order, the separate sounds in each syllable, and then to combine the sounds into the syllables and the syllables into the word.

Since every word consists of one or more syllables, and each syllable is composed of simple sounds, it follows that by building up the syllables, sound by sound, and then by combining these syllables in their proper order, the word is constructed, if the proper syllable be accented.

3. It is important to observe the place of the accent.

Many words are mispronounced simply because the accent is misplaced. In the word exquisite, for instance, if the accent be placed upon the first syllable, the word is correctly pronounced; whereas, if it be placed upon the second syllable, it is a mispronunciation. With this exception, there is no difference between these two pronunciations of the word.

4. It is necessary to become acquainted with the Sounds of the English Language, as found on pp. 3-14.

Since the diacritical marks represent the exact sounds to be used in the pronunciation of a word, it results that the sounds should be well-known in order that a word may be pronounced correctly.

For this reason the reader will find an acquaintance with the sounds of the English language of vital importance.

- 5. Remember that the signs or diacritical marks used to indicate the correct pronunciations of words are not spellings of these words in the ordinary sense, but simply symbols for the sounds of the words.
- 6. Observe that in becoming acquainted with the signs or diacritical marks, the vowel signs are the principal ones to be learned, since the consonant signs are generally familiar to the reader.
- 7. Observe that a reference to the Key of Signs will be found at the foot of each page.

It is well to consult this in all doubtful cases. If still further explanation is required, turn to the chapter on The Sounds of the English Language, p. 3-

8. Form the habit of using the correct Foreign Sounds rather than their substitutes.

If a person is acquainted with the French and German languages, it will, of course, be an easy matter to pronounce these foreign sounds correctly.

Otherwise it would be well to hear the sounds carefully pronounced by some one acquainted with them.

If, however, no such person can be found, the sounds may generally be learned by carefully following the directions given for producing them. But if one does not feel sufficiently confident of his ability to produce these sounds, he may, as a final resort, fall back on their English substitutes.

- 9. Although the abbreviations in this book are not numerous, time may be saved by at once fixing in the mind those few that are not already familiar.
- ro. Endeavor carefully to carry out the spirit of the preceding suggestions in the use of the book.

If this is done, it is hoped that no difficulty will be found in ascertaining the pronunciation of any word given in the list.

Note.—Any person, wishing to master the pronunciation of the twenty thousand words, can easily do so in a few hours, by merely marking with a pencil those words presenting any difficulty, and afterwards reading the marked words, two or three times. Of course, any one person would have difficulty with comparatively few words in the book.

TWENTY THOUSAND WORDS OFTEN MISPRONOUNCED

Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you. \* \* \*  ${\tt Shakespeare}.$

Damas.—* * * The Prince of Como does not understand his own language!

Melnotte.—Not as you pronounce it; who the deuce could?

Bulwer.

Fine words! I wonder where you stole 'em.  $$\operatorname{\textbf{Dean}}$$  Swift.

In words, as fashions, the same rule will hold:
Alike fantastic, if too new, or old;
Be not the first by whom the new are tried,
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.

POPE.

either—ē'thēr or ī'thēr (Web., C., Stor.); ē'thēr

(Stand., Wor.).

"The pronunciation i'ther is both American and English, but is more prevalent in England (especially in London and the south) than in America. In the 17th century the word was pronounced approximately a'ther, as shown by Ellis, and, according to the most reliable orthoepists of the period, i'ther seems to have been the preferred pronunciation, succeeding a'ther in the 18th century. According to Walker, both e'ther and i'ther were in general cultivated use by 1791, since which time the orthoepists have favored e'ther as being more generally preferred by good speakers."—Web.

"Either and neither are so often pronounced ither and nither that it is hard to say to which class they belong. Analogy, however, without hesitation, gives the diphthong the sound of long open e, rather than that of i, and rhymes them with breather, one who breathes."-Walker.

"Between  $\bar{e}i'ther$  and  $e\bar{v}'ther$  there is little, in point of good usage, to choose; . . . but usage, as well as regularity, favors the sound of  $\bar{e}$  in these two words."—Smart.

"For the pronunciation i'ther and ni'ther there is no authority, either of analogy or of the best speakers."—R. G. White.

The consensus of the above authorities is decidedly in favor of ē'thēr; although ī'thēr is the pronunciation of a very respectable minority in the United States.

A Scotch professor, being asked which of the two pronunciations of this word he preferred, replied: "Ayther (ā'thēr) will do."

ide (chemical termination)—īd or ĭd.

"The endings -ine and ide in chemical terms are variously pronounced. In the case of -ine, usage in America is mostly divided between -ēn and -in, very few chemists using -īn. Apparently a majority of chemists at the present time pronounce these words with -ēn, but the pronunciation with -in seems to be slowly gaining ground. The Oxford English Dictionary gives -īn only in most of these chemical terms, but this is by no means the only pronunciation in use in England. In the case of -ide, especially in those words which have been long in the language, usage decidedly favors -īd, though -īd is also used by many.

"The Chemical Section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science voted in 1889 in favor of the pronunciation of all chemical terms in -ine and -ide with short i as in ill. It then, further, voted to drop final e in the spelling, as in bromin, chlorin, iodid, bromid, chlorid, etc.; and these forms are used to some extent in the United States.

"In terms ending in -ine and -ide the pronunciation often varies even in the mouth of the same speaker, and this is especially true of teachers, who often are obliged to pronounce such words in the way that seems most likely to avoid confusion of the endings."—Web.

rise (n.)—rīz or rīs.

"The older pronouncing dictionaries from Walker (c. 1800) have generally preferred rīs, on the analogy of other nouns distinguished in pronunciation by sharp s from the corresponding verbs of like spelling and accent: as abuse, noun and verb; use, noun and verb; house, noun and verb, etc. Most recent dictionaries prefer rīz, good usage having at all times been divided."—Web.

Walker (1809) says: "This word very properly takes the pure sound of s to distinguish it from the verb, but does not adhere to this distinction so inviolably as the nouns use, excuse, etc.; for we sometimes hear 'the rise and fall of the Roman empire,' the rise and fall of provisions,' etc., with the s like the s. The pure s, however, is more agreeable to analogy, and ought to be scrupulously preserved in these phrases by all correct speakers."
